

CURRENT

A current is created as gravity forces water downstream, swirling into pockets of movement that is surrounded by calmer bodies of water. The concept of current is derived from the site of Mysig Homes, Stillwater Minnesota. Mysig Homes is designed with biophilia and nature in the forefront of the design. The design of the space is a made to create pockets of movement for active individuals looking for an energizing environment to live in. This community will act as an energizing force that brings individuals together through circulation, lighting, and way finding. All while being surrounded by areas of serenity inside and outside of the community.
